A certain (Hu Chieh), "comrade of the Secretariat of the North-East China Regional Bureau of the CCP Central Committee", in general terms called on peasants and revolutionary masses to grasp revolution, stimulate production and take up spring farmwork.

A second speaker, (Chang Hsin-yu), of the Shenyang PLA units, explained the important role of poor and lower-middle peasants and rural cadres in agricultural production and called for greater support from the masses on all fronts for current spring farmwork. He also urged revolutionary comrades to earnestly respond to Mao Tse-tung's call to grasp revolution and stimulate production and form a mighty alliance to seize power.

The last speaker, (Yang Chieh), "leading member of the Liaoning PLA military district", also spoke of the importance of spring farmwork in connection with the great cultural revolution and noted its importance for the Vietnamese people's anti-US struggle for national salvation. He called on revolutionary comrades, especially those in agriculture, to concretely respond to the call to grasp revolution and stimulate production. He urged the masses to exercise high vigilance against any destructive activities by reactionary elements and organisations.

Nanchang Meeting of Cadres Addressed by Local PLA Commander

Nanchang regional service 14.20 GMT 26.2.67

Precis, with quotations, of 26th February meeting:

A meeting of cadres of Provincial, Special District and County levels was successfully convened in Nanchang on 26th February. Its chief tasks are: to mobilise the people of Kiangsi to respond to the great call of Chairman Mao and the Party Central [Committee] to grasp revolution and boost production and fire the first shot in spring farming and to strive for victory in revolution and production.

"The 690 participants include representatives of the Province, Special Districts, Counties and PLA units; Liu Jui-sen, Huang Hsien, Kuo Kuang-chou; Wang Cho-chao, Liu Chien-hua; members of the former Provincial, Special District and County Party and Government leadership groups; and representatives of the Provincial, Special District, and County Revolutionary rebels. Wu Jui-shan, commander of Kiangsi Military District, is presiding."

Delivering the opening speech, Wu Jui-shan first pointed out that the present state of grasping revolution and boosting production in the province, as in the rest of the country, is excellent and is getting better and better. "The great proletarian cultural revolution in the rural areas is developing prosperously in accordance with the Party Central [Committee]'s instructions. In many places, the great alliance of the proletarian revolutionaries has been formed and the movement has entered a new stage of seizing power from a handful of Party office-holders taking the capitalist road. Encouraged by the great cultural revolution, the various places are now preparing for spring farming. However, we must see that, in some areas, the poor and lower-middle peasants and revolutionary cadres have not yet concentrated ideologically on production. Some comrades have not yet attached sufficient importance to the work of supporting agriculture. The class enemies blow evil winds and light phantom fires, trying to sabotage the great proletarian cultural revolution and production. We must have a high degree of vigilance over these questions."

After speaking of the importance of agriculture and of keeping up to schedule in spring farming, Wu Jui-shan said that the meeting should solve the following problems:

(1) It is essential to raise high the great Red flag of Mao Tse-tung's thinking, give prominence to politics, study and apply Chairman Mao's works and study the Party Central Committee's letter to the communes. In this way, the ideological basis will be laid for securing a great bumper harvest this year. The masses should be freely launched to solve specific problems in agriculture.