(ii) Inspired by the series of important instructions of Chairman Mao and the Party Central Committee, the commanders and fighters of a certain PLA unit in Chekiang have studied theory and grasped the Army's traditions. They recently went to the Hangchow combined printing and dyeing factory, the Hangchow No 1 cotton textile and printing and dyeing factory, the Hangchow No 2 cotton textile factory, and [words indistinct] to participate in productive industrial labour. Thus they further strengthened the unity between the Army and the Government and between the Army and the people, boosted the morale of the workers and staff members, and promoted the development of the excellent situation in both revolution and production.

The PLA unit's Party committee attached great importance to participating in productive industrial labour and supporting socialist construction on the part of the commanders and fighters. It held a special meeting to make arrangements for this purpose. Those present at the meeting recalled the mass movement for production in Yenan during the war of resistance against Japan in which commanders and fighters had actively supported people in hilly areas in reclaiming wasteland and had helped the latter with farmwork in order to prepare the material basis for the victory of the war. The cammanders and fighters were then received by our great leader Chairman Mao himself. They recalled the period of socialist construction in which PLA commanders and fighters had actively supported industrial and agricultural production, thus forming a close relationship of unity in fighting. They discussed the great significance of PLA commanders and fighters supporting industrial production in developing the national economy, in strengthening the unity between the Army and the Government and between the Army and the people, and in consolidating the dictatorship of the proletariat. Thus the meeting decided that the more than 6,000 members of the unit, led by their commanders, would go by groups to participate in labour on the frontline of industrial production, beginning 19th July.

On the frontline of industrial production, many battle-tested fighters have given full play to the same vigour, the same revolutionary enthusiasm and the same daring death-defying spirit they displayed in the revolutionary war years. Together with workers, they have worked hard to increase production despite the hot weather. Led by their leading cadres, the commanders and fighters worked vigorously. Upon sitting at a lathe, (Yao Hsiao-ming), a repair worker, did not even stop to wipe the sweat from his brow. He worked eight hours on end and made hundreds of parts to meet the needs of production. Defying the hot sun, members of the 1st flak battery worked hard for a whole day to help repair the roof of a factory, receiving praise from the workers.

During the breaks between labour sessions, the commanders and fighters also paid attention to carrying out mass work, propagating the important instructions of Chairman Mao and the Party Central Committee, promoting the revolutionary unity of the workers. Some of them presented workers with copies of Marxist-Leninist works and Chairman Mao's works, while others held discussion meetings with workers during breaks between labouring sessions. Still some other commanders and fighters have helped workshops publish special columns on grasping revolution and promoting production.

Members of the 1st and 2nd company of the unit working in the Chekiang woollen textile factory have helped two workshops hold study classes, at which the participants have studied theory, grasped the line, attached importance to unity, and carried out revolutionary emulation. While participating in labour, the commanders and fighters of the unit have carried forward our Army's tradition of deeply cherishing the people and strictly implemented "the three main rules of discipline and the eight points for attention". They cherished everything in the factories and recovered every screw, every small piece of wire for reuse. Some fighters have been organized to help the factory's cooks and to send meals from mess halls to workers in the worshops Barbering and laundry teams have been organized to cut hair and wash clothes for the workers The units medical personnel have gone to workshops to treat worker patients.

The workers warmly welcomed the commanders and fighters participating in industrial productive labour. "The whole nation should learn from the PLA." Many
