The county Party committee earnestly studied the Party's basic line and the writings of Marx, Lenin and Chairman Mao on the theory of the dictatorship of the proletariat, summing up their experience and enhancing their consciousness of continuing the revolution under the dictatorship of the proletariat. They conducted education in the Party's basic line and encouraged the cadres to fight self-interest so that they could lead the masses in criticizing capitalist tendencies. Soon the movement to learn from Tachai in the county underwent a profound change.

"In upholding the Party's basic line and criticizing capitalist tendencies, we must dare to struggle and be good at struggle. Some cadres knew that the capitalist tendencies in the countryside were instigated by hidden class enemies or brought about by the spontaneous tendency of small production, particularly among the well-to-do peasants, but they were afraid to make any move, lest they might confuse the two different types of contradictions. Other cadres found some problems rather complex and did not know how to enforce the policies."

The county Party committee looked into the situation and realized its complex nature. It realized that capitalist tendencies must not go uncriticized. The proper course was, therefore, to arm the cadres with the Party's basic line and encourage them to learn to struggle.

At (Ashihkung) production brigade in (Talang) commune, capitalist tendencies were rather pronounced for a time. The county Party committee sent its cadres to join the commune Party committee and the production brigade Party branch in arousing the cadres and masses to study the Party's basic line and analyse the trend of class struggle. "With their ideological consciousness raised, the cadres and masses soon exposed and attacked the handful of class enemies who had stirred up troubles as well as the newly engendered bourgeois elements. In dealing with the spontaneous capitalist tendency among some cadres and commune members, they upheld the formula 'unity-criticism-unity' and handled correctly the contradictions among the people. Through study, recollection and comparison, criticism and self-criticism, they patiently carried out political and ideological education and instilled socialist ideas in them. By so doing, they united the vast majority of cadres and people. As for some commune members, who paid too much attention to small personal undertakings and did not actively participate in collective productive labour, they organized them to study Chairman Mao's teaching that only socialism can save China." With their socialist consciousness enhanced, these commune members eagerly criticized capitalist ideas, straightened out the relationship between the collective and the individual, and actively participated in collective productive labour. In 1974, the total grain production in this production brigade was three times that of 1970.

In recent years, the county Party committee has also learned the importance of helping basic-level cadres in ideological struggles in order to raise their consciousness of continuing the revolution under the dictatorship of the proletariat. The county Party committee held three or four study classes each year for the cadres and also several cadre meetings to review their experiences. Many cadres have thus recovered their youthful vitality and actively resisted corrosion by the bourgeoisie; owing to the revolutionary spirit among the cadres, nine production brigades have become advanced units in learning from Tachai.

(ii) Excerpts from an article by (Kuo Ta-chiang), "Arm the masses with the theory of the dictatorship of the proletariat":

... The experience of Kueite County shows that no matter how complex the problems may be, we can strictly distinguish and handle correctly the two different types of contradictions as long as we arm the masses with the theory of the dictatorship of the proletariat, raise their socialist consciousness, and fully expose the contradictions for concrete analysis. There the class enemy incited some commune members to engage in capitalism, while hiding behind the scenes to carry out subversive activities in a deliberate attempt to confuse the two types of contradictions and cover himself. The Party organization mobilized the cadres and masses to criticize the capitalist tendencies in the
