III THE FAR EAST

0900 gmt 21 Mar 75 - 1200 gmt 22 Mar 75

Anniversary of Cambodian rebel organizations A grand reception in Peking to mark the fifth anniversary of the National United Front of Cambodia and its Army, given by the RGNUC Ambassador to China was reported by the NCNA and Peking home service on 22nd March. Among the guests were Vice-Premiers Teng Hsiao-ping and Chi Teng-kuei and Li Ching-chuan, Vice-Chairman of the NPC Standing Committee. Speakers included Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua and Norodom Sihanouk. Continuing firm Chinese support to the Cambodian people was emphasized in a message to Prince Sihanouk and his Premier Penn Nouth from Chou En-lai and Chu Teh*, and in a 'People's Daily' editorial, both carried in full by the NCNA and Peking home service also on the 22nd.

China blames Rhodesia for ZANU leader's murder The NCNA on 22nd March transmitted an article by Commentator entitled "Racist atrocity" and published that day in the 'People's Daily'. It said that the Smith regime in Rhodesia had 'brutally murdered' Herbert Chitepo, leader of the Zimbabwe African National Union, on the 18th - a crime which had "roused the Chinese people to burning indignation and strong condemnation". The Chinese people, it said, would, as always, firmly support the just struggle of the people of Zimbabwe who were certain of complete victory.

Suharto invited to North Korea Jakarta radio reported on 20th March that Kim Il-sung had extended an invitation to President Suharto to visit North Korea.

North Korean Assembly to meet in April Pyongyang radio announced on 20th March that "the fifth session of the Fifth Supreme People's Assembly would be convened in Pyongyang on 8th April.

Reactions to new Thai Government The Pathet Lao radio said on 21st March that the new Thai Government's attitude to independence and sovereignty remained ambiguous although it had announced that it intended to establish diplomatic relations with China and other communist countries and that US troops would be withdrawn. On the decision to continue the state of emergency in certain areas, the radio assumed that this would include the Thai-Lao border area where in the past Thai troops had "confronted" those in Laos*. An article in 'Nhan Dan' on 22nd March, reported by the North Vietnamese news agency, said the Thai Government's statements on US troop withdrawal and on relations with North Vietnam had "partly responded" to the wishes of the people but at the same time they also showed hesitation, indecision and deviousness*. On 20th March the NCNA reported briefly without comment that a new government had been formed in Thailand and gave the names of the Premier, Defence Minister and Foreign Minister.

Burmese Government operations against communists (FE/4861/ii) According to Rangoon radio on 21st March, only 17 communist insurgents were left in the Pegu area following the recent operation there by Government forces.*

President's Rule in Nagaland All India Radio reported on 22nd March that the Indian President had declared the suspension of the State Assembly and the proclamation of President's Rule in Nagaland, following a report from the Governor that it was unlikely that a stable Ministry could be formed out of the present assembly. The Governor had also referred to the security problems created by insurgents who received arms from a foreign country.

'People's Daily' editorial on studying Mao's instruction An editorial in the 21st March 'People's Daily', transmitted by the NCNA, said that Party Committees should regard "as their foremost task" the study of Mao's instruction on proletarian dictatorship. "Some of our comrades in leading positions", the editorial said, "even regard capitalist things as socialist, and revisionist slogans as Marxist."

A INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS

1 GENERAL AND WESTERN AFFAIRS

Britain and the Common Market A London dispatch dated 21st March and entitled "Stronger call in Britain for continued EEC membership" transmitted by the NCNA (in English 1200 gmt 22 Mar 75) reported that "the call for continued EEC membership is growing in the country with the conclusion of Britain's renegotiation of its Common Market terms" at the Dublin conference. The article quoted statements by Edward Heath, Eldon Griffiths, Reginald Maudling, Margaret Thatcher and Jeremy Thorpe in favour of staying in EEC and a "Daily Express" opinion poll that 45% of those interviewed favoured Britain's staying in Europe while 38% opposed it. After 11 months of negotiations the British Government "gave up its demand for renegotiating the Rome Treaty and the treaty on its entry into the community", the dispatch said, "whereas the eight other West European countries achieved a compromise with it on reducing its share in the EEC budget". After a two day heated debate in the Labour Cabinet, Prime Minister Harold Wilson had told the House of Commons that, in his view, Britain's objectives had been substantially albeit not completely achieved.

NCNA reports British White Paper on defence Reporting that the British Government's "White Paper" on defence for 1975 proposed cuts in defence expenditure while admitting an increase in Soviet military strength in Europe, the NCNA (in English 1630 gmt 23 Mar 75) quoted the Conservative Party's spokesman on defence as saying that the Government had decided on the cuts without regard to Britain's commitments despite the fact that the "White Paper" had acknowledged that the Soviets' defence posture went far beyond their needs and that their aim continued to be to undermine Western Europe. The report also reported serious concern among NATO members, as shown by the NATO headquarters communique.

NCNA Super-Powers' activities at UN industrial conference In its report of the second general conference of the UN Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) in Lima, the NCNA (in English 2035 gmt 21 Mar 75) stated that ever since the conference opened on 12th March, a head-on clash had been going on between the Third World countries and the two super-Powers. The main issue had been the conference's "Declaration on International Industrial Development and Co-operation" and its "Plan of Action for Assisting the Developing Countries". Many Third World countries, the report said, had declared their support of the "Declaration and Plan of Action" which had been submitted by the "Group of 77" as a basis for the conference's documents, because it was fundamentally in keeping with the UN General Assembly's resolutions and expressed the peoples' desire for sovereignty and independence in developing their national economies and industries, and at the same time denounced aggression, colonialism, and exploitation by the super Powers. Against this, the super-Powers had clung to their hegemonic position. One of the super-Powers, while professing to subscribe to the "Group of 77" document, had tried to alter the essence of the draft by trying to insert in it "snags" such as "detente" and "disarmament". The other super-Power meanwhile, wanted to veto the document's basic principles and to turn it into an unrecognizable hodge-podge. In effect both super Powers, though using different tactics, had the same aim, i.e. of leading the conference astray and preventing it from yielding positive results in order to maintain their hegemonic control of the Third World countries.

2 THE USSR AND EASTERN EUROPE

Soviet Union Uses Joint Ventures to Exploit Third World

NCNA in English 0810 gmt 21 Mar 75

Excerpts from correspondent's report

Soviet social-imperialists have in the last few years escalated their economic expansion abroad. Copying Western monopoly capitalist ways of management and playing neo-colonialist tricks, they have exported capital to developing countries to invest in "joint ventures" in order to get the maximum profit out of exploiting cheap raw materials and local labour.

After much effort and with upstart brashness, the Soviet revisionists succeeded in a relatively short period in setting up "joint ventures" in 12 developing countries in Asia, Africa and Latin America. . . Lured by the prospect of enormous profit, the Soviet revisionists are far from content with the present limited number of "joint ventures" and are exploring possibilities for making new investments wherever possible. . . The Soviet revisionists' "joint ventures" or "joint companies" are essentially disguised "international companies" of the Western monopoly capital type. Flaunting the banner of economic "aid" and under the guise of "establishing contact" and "co-ordination" with other countries and making a pretence of "helping" to develop industries, the Soviet revisionists use the "joint ventures", once they have been set up, to penetrate the key economic sectors of other countries. In this way they have made exorbitant profits and opened the way for further economic expansion and political control. . . In their anxiety to gain a foothold, the Soviet Union has even provided other countries with the loans to buy shares in such "joint ventures" and has supplied the key facilities and means of transportation to set them up. These joint capital enterprises are actually companies in which Soviet revisionism provides the funds and materials while the recipient country provides the labour force. As with international monopolies, the bosses in Moscow are really expert profit-makers. . .

It is not by chance that the Soviet revisionists have gone in for establishing "joint ventures" in developing countries. Their actions are governed by the capitalist law of development. Facts show that with the intensification of monopoly in their domestic economy and its attendant decay and parasitic tendencies, the Soviets urgently need to plunder and exploit overseas, to export capital as a means of promoting the export of commodities and getting more profit. This is a new trend in the Soviet revisionists' economic expansion abroad.

Today the people of developing countries are intensifying their struggle against plunder, exploitation and economic control to safeguard their national resources and economic rights. As they are determined to get rid of the old colonialist enslavement and plunder, they will certainly not tolerate new and harsher economic exploitation by new colonialists. "International companies" run by international monopolies have long been notorious and targets of attack. In setting up their "joint ventures" in imitation of the "international companies", the Soviet revisionists have once again betrayed their reactionary features of social-imperialism and are bound to meet with vehement opposition.

In Brief

Exposure of Soviet "espionage" in India (Cf. FE/4860/A2/3) Peking home service broadcast (0300 gmt 21 Mar 75) an article by (?Tung Fang), entitled "False friend with honey on lips and murder in heart", which said that Indian press reports had explicitly stated that the foreigners recently involved in a spying case in India had been India's "close friends" - Soviet personnel stationed in India.

Another Chinese attack on Brezhnev's agricultural policies (FE/4822/A2/1 2) The NCNA transmitted (in English 0738 gmt 21 Mar 75) a correspondent's report on the "deplorable state" of Soviet agriculture since Brezhnev came to power in 1965. Brezhnev had claimed that he had made an important personal contribution to Soviet agriculture since that time, but in fact output of Soviet grain and other major products had been very uneven and the situation in livestock breeding was even more serious. "The reason for the depressed state of the Soviet economy is simply that in the past decade Brezhnev has gone further than his predecessor Khrushchev in implementing a revisionist line and policy in agriculture", the report said. It said in conclusion "Facts show that the past decade is the 10 years of the bankrupt agricultural policy under Brezhnev. In the light of this, the extravagant claims about a 'turning point' and Brezhnev's 'important personal contribution' are not only laughable but a grotesque travesty of the facts.

Belgrade University delegation in China A three-member delegation of the University of Belgrade led by Rector Jovan Gligorijevic arrived in Peking on 19th March for a friendly visit to China at the invitation of Peking University, and was greeted at the airport by Chairman Wang Lien-lung and Vice-Chairman Kuo Tsung-lin of the Peking University Revolutionary Committee. (NCNA in English 1245 gmt 20 Mar 75)

NCNA on Soviet financial pressure on India (cf.FE/4858/A2/1) The NCNA (in English 1545 gmt 21 Mar 75) referred to a 17th March report in the Indian 'Financial Express', according to which the Soviet Union had asked India for revaluation, by about 4,000 million rupees, in repayment of its outstanding credit and interest on the plea that the rupee had been devalued. This arbitary demand, the agency said, had aroused resentment in India since the term and the amount of the principal and interest to be repaid by India to the USSR had already been fixed.

NCNA on Soviet missile tests The NCNA (in English 1629 gmt 21 Mar 75) referred to a Tass statement that the Soviet Union had carried out a new series of ICBM tests in the Pacific from 17th to 20th March. It went on to say: "Amidst the whistle of missiles, the Soviet revisionists continue to beat the drums for 'detente' and 'disarmament'. In a speech made in Hungary on 18th March, Brezhnev prated about 'limitation' and 'reduction of armed forces and armaments of States'. . . The Soviet revisionists . . . preach 'disarmament' daily, but in reality their armaments are expanding with each passing day."

Soviet aircraft help to transport Lao refugees (Text) KPL reports that two Soviet AN24s arrived in Vientiane on 16th March. They were sent by the Soviet Union to help transport refugees in response to the PGNU's request. The first flights of the two Soviet aircraft were scheduled to begin on 18th March to transport fraternal refugees from Wattay airport in Vientiane to the Plaine des Jarres airfield. (Pathet Lao radio 1030 gmt 20 Mar 75)

Soviet scholarships for Pakistani students (Text) The Soviet Union has given 45 scholarships for Pakistan students to study in Soviet educational institutions and technical colleges and 10 scholarships for postgraduate studies and scientific research. The scholarships have been given under an exchange programme. (Karachi in English for abroad 1530 gmt 21 Mar 75)

GDR Ambassador to Laos (FE/4858/A2//2) GDR Ambassador Jarck and his wife left Viengsay for Vientiane via Hanoi on 19th March after their three-day visit to the Lao liberated zone. (Pathet Lao radio 1030 gmt 20 Mar 75)

3. FAR EASTERN RELATIONS

Message to Sihanouk from Chou and Chu

NCNA in English 1231 gmt 22 Mar 75

Text of message sent on 22nd March from Chu Teh, Chairman of the NPC Standing Committee and Chou En-lai, Premier of the State Council, to Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, Head of State and Chairman of the NUFC, and Samdech Penn Nouth, Chairman of the Political Bureau of the Central Committee of the NUFC and Premier of the RGNUC

On the occasion of the fifth anniversary of the founding of the NUFC and the Cambodian People's National Liberation Armed Forces, we wish to extend, on behalf of Chairman Mao Tsetung and the Chinese Government and people, our warmest congratulations and high respects to you and to the NUFC, the RGNUC and the CPNLAF. NUFC has traversed a glorious course of five years since its birth amidst the flames of the anti-imperialist struggle. In this period, the heroic Cambodian people and CPNLAF, rallying around NUFC with Head of State Samdech Norodom Sihanouk as its Chairman, have adhered to a correct revolutionary line and brought about an excellent situation by fighting with dauntless militancy. Thus they have added an epic chapter to the annals of Cambodia's struggle for independence and national liberation and made a valuable contribution to the struggle of all oppressed nations and people for emancipation.

At present, the situation in Cambodia is most heartening. The mighty offensive of the CPNLAF in this dry season has severely battered the traitorous clique in Phnom Penh, and reduced it to utter despair. No US imperialist panacea can save the traitorous Lon Nol clique from its doom. The valiant Cambodian people, united as one and persisting in a sustained fight, will thoroughly crush the traitorous Lon Nol clique and win complete victory in their just struggle for national salvation.

The Chinese and Cambodian peoples are close comrades-in-arms and brothers. We have always regarded it as our bounden internationalist duty to support the just struggle of the Cambodian people. The Chinese Government and people will, as always, firmly support the Cambodian people in carrying their just struggle for national salvation through to the end. Final victory surely belongs to the heroic people of Cambodia!

Peking Reception to Mark Cambodian Anniversary

NCNA in English 2022 gmt 21 Mar 75

Text of report:

The Chinese People's Association for Friendship with Foreign Countries and the China-Cambodia Friendship Association gave a reception here [Peking] this evening [21st March] in warm celebration of the fifth anniversary of the founding of the Cambodian National United Front and the People's Armed Forces for National Liberation.

Among the guests at the reception were Samdech Penn Nouth, Chairman of the Political Bureau of the NUFC Central Committee and Premier of the Royal Government of National Union, and Mme Penn Nouth; Gen Duong Sam Ol, member of the Political Bureau of the NUFC Central Committee; Thiounn Prasith, alternate member of the Political Bureau of the NUFC Central Committee; Van Piny, Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Royal Government of National Union, and Mme Van Piny; Toch Kham Doeun, Cambodian Ambassador to China, and Mme Toch Kham Doeun; and a number of other distinguished Cambodian guests.

Present were Chi Teng-kuei, Vice-Premier of the State Council, Han Nien-lung, Vice Foreign Minister, Shen Chien, Deputy Head of the International Liaison Department of the Central Committee of the Chinese Communist Party, Chen Chieh, Vice Minister of Foreign Trade, Han Tsung-cheng, Vice-Minister of Economic Relations with Foreign Countries, Wang Shang-jung, Deputy Chief of General Staff of the Chinese People's Liberation Army, Chai Tse-min, President of the Chinese People's Association for Friendship with Foreign Countries, and leading members of Departments concerned, including Lin Lin, Chou Jung-kuo and Wang Chen, and the Chinese Ambassador to Cambodia, Sun Hao.

Chai Tse-min and Premier Penn Nouth made speeches at the reception.

Chai Tse-min spoke highly of the Cambodian people under the leadership of the National United Front with Samdech Norodom Sihanouk as Chairman for having won one brilliant victory after another in the past five years in their arduous struggle against US imperialism and the Lon Nol traitorous clique for realizing the five-point statement and the political programme of the NUFC.

He said "The present situation is excellent on the battlefield in Cambodia. So far this year, the patriotic Cambodian armymen and civilians have mounted vigorous offensives, wiped out the enemy's effective forces en masse, captured many strongholds and towns of key importance, and tightened the encirclement of Phnom Penh. This has put the Lon Nol traitorous clique in a state of chaos as it has nearly exhausted its supplies of food and ammunition and can only depend on emergency air-drop supply from the US to gain time in its death-bed struggle.

"But no matter how US imperialism steps up its aid to boost the morale of the Lon Nol traitorous clique, it cannot save the Lon Nol clique from its doomed downfall. We are convinced that no reactionary forces can stop the heroic Cambodian people in their courageous advance on the road to victory. The emergence of an independent, peaceful, neutral, sovereign, democratic and prosperous new Cambodia is inevitable.

"The people of China and Cambodia are closely related brothers and comrades-in-arms. The Chinese people are determed to follow Chairman Mao's teaching, fulfil our internationalist duties and resolutely support the Cambodian people in their just struggle until complete victory is won," Chai Tse-min said.

In his speech, Premier Penn Nouth gave an account of the victories the Cambodian people have won in their struggle against US imperialism and its lackeys in Phnom Penh over the past five years.

He said: This tremendous victory is earth-shaking. It is achieved by the Cambodian people in the spirit of fighting valiantly in defiance of difficulties and daring to make any sacrifices in the struggle against US imperialism and the Phnom Penh traitors, and in flames of war for the people's national liberation.

The Premier sternly denounced US imperialism for its crime of continuing to give aid to the Phnom Penh traitorous clique. "It is impossible to end the war and bring lasting peace to Cambodia unless US imperialism stops its aggression against Cambodia and its interference in Cambodian affairs," he said.

The Premier expressed the determination of the National United Front of Cambodia, the Royal Government of National Union of Cambodia and the People's Armed Forces for National Liberation to persevere in resolute struggle and make no compromises, retreats or negotiations until complete victory is won in the near future and finally realize the historic five-point statement issued by Samdech Norodom Sihanouk, Head of State and Chairman of the National United Front of Cambodia.

Premier Penn Nouth warmly praised the militant friendship between the people of Cambodia and China. He said: "We regard China and the Chinese people as our powerful backing and most reliable rear area."

The reception was permeated with a warm atmosphere of the militant unity between the people of China and Cambodia

[The VNA (in English 1658 gmt) reported on 21st March that a Cambodian anniversary meeting, organized by the Vietnam Fatherland Front Central Committee and the Vietnam-Cambodia Friendship Association, took place in Hanoi that day. Le Duc Tho, member of the Political Bureau of the VWP's Central Committee, Phan Trong Tue, DRV Vice-Premier and President of the Vietnam-Cambodia Friendship Association, Hoang Minh Giam, Cabinet Minister, member of the VFF's Central Committee and Vice-President of the Association, Phan Hien, DRV Vice-Minister of Foreign Affairs, and other prominent personages attended. (b) Abstract of rebel report

Our forces continue to attack Neak Luong from all sides. In the night of 18th/19th March our artillery shelled the camp of the Fourth Brigade, destroying command headquarters, radio and telephone installations and an ammunition dump. Thirty-one enemy troops were killed or wounded. At present the waterway from Neak Luong to Phnom Penh is completely cut and enemy vessels can no longer ply between Neak Luong and Phnom Penh. As for the Neak Luong airfield, it is also entirely under our control. The enemy can supply Neak Luong only by air. Our forces are launching violent attacks on the east bank of the Mekong opposite Phnom Penh. In particular, we swept away the last enemy position at Savay Chroum. Meanwhile we have been continuously shelling the enemy's positions at Prek Leap, Chrui Changvar and inside Phnom Penh since 14th March. In the night of 17th/18th March and on 18th March we fired several rockets on enemy military strategic installations in Phnom Penh, including the enemy command headquarters, sports city, the Lon Nol Palace at Chamcar Mon etc. Our powerful attacks on the 43rd and 48th Brigades in the Tuol Leap area continue. On the morning of 18th March, we set two M-113 armoured vehicles on fire and inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy. At the same time, we intensively shelled the Pochentong airport. On the morning of 19th March, we destroyed an enemy C-123 aircraft. Fierce fighting still continues on the front west of Phnom Penh. On the front south-west of Phnom Penh and on Highway 4, the Ang Snuol Kompong Speu stretch of Highway 4 is under the firm control of the CPNLAF. On the morning of 19th March we destroyed and liberated four enemy positions on Highway 4 and west of O Kraing Ambal ("Voice of NUFC of Phnom Penh" 0700 gmt 21 Mar 75)

Other Reports from Cambodia

Thai Premier on Cambodia In an interview granted to reporters after the National Security Council meeting on 21st March, Premier Khukrit Pramot said the Council had discussed the present situation in Cambodia and believed that it did not affect Thailand's security and that, even if Phnom Penh fell, the war would not spread to Thailand. On Thai aid to Cambodia, he declared that there would be no military aid, but Thailand would offer Cambodia humanitarian aid such as food and rice. Thailand would give Cambodia as much aid as possible. However, he continued, the Cambodian Government had not yet asked for any assistance. Thailand did not know in which way Cambodia wanted to be assisted, nor how much money Thailand itself needed for aid funds. The Premier further stated that the USA was no longer using a Thai base for supplying arms to Cambodia and that, in fact, it had no right to do so. He also said that Thai diplomats would not yet be withdrawn from Phnom Penh. However, the Thai Ambassador to Cambodia would return to Bangkok to report to the Government on the present situation in that country. A number of embassy staff would remain in Phnom Penh to continue their work; but their safety must be ensured. (Bangkok home service 1300 gmt 21 Mar 75)

Sihanouk interview to Tanjug correspondent Tanjug (in English 1104 gmt) transmitted on 21st March a report of an interview given by Norodom Sihanouk to the agency's Peking correspondent. Sihanouk stated that the Royal Government of National Unity of Cambodia will not agree to either negotiations or a coalition Government with the enemies, not even if the USA dismissed all seven traitors with Lon Nol at their head. In his opinion, to accept negotiations would mean to agree to a halfway solution, whereas a coalition would imply the inclusion of traitors in the Government. "We have the Government which will enter Phnom Penh and which we shall neither change nor [will we] include in it anyone outside the National Unity Front", Sihanouk said. He rejected, the report said, all attempts by Washington to persuade him into accepting negotiations through the Democratic majority leader, Senator Mike Mansfield. "We are stronger than ever, we are inevitably winning in the present liberation war and we wish Cambodia to be completely free, independent, non-aligned, and without traitors whose presence in the Government would mean that we have sold half our freedom gained with blood."

The Head of State said that the National Unity Front is waging a war of attrition, although it could liberate Phnom Penh very quickly. Sihanouk explained that in spite of permanent attacks on Phnom Penh and its only airport, the liberation units do not plan to go at once into the city, as it may give the Americans a pretext for bringing their troops and air force into Cambodia, allegedly to save their own men and those of their allies. He went on to stress, Tanjug said, that the National Unity Front and the Government will pardon all for their past, provided they crossed over to the Patriotic Liberation Forces. This does not include the seven traitors, who will be shot. As a possible alternative, Sihanouk said the USA may evacuate from Phnom Penh their entire personnel, and with them can go also the Cambodians who want to. "To all who remain in the city, lay down their arms and do not resist the liberation units when they enter the city, we guarantee complete amnesty", Sihanouk said. He promised to give the Americans enough time to evacuate their entire personnel and their followers, and that he will enter Phnom Penh only after that.

They now completely control Darlac Province In all, the Darlac troops and people have destroyed the 45th and 53rd Regiments of the enemy's 23rd Division, the Eighth Armoured Regiment the 22nd Multi regimental Rangers Group, four "Civil Guard" battalions, and 53 civil defence platoons. They also destroyed the command post and headquarters of the 53rd Regiment and of the 45th Regiment. The Darlac troops and people have thus put out of action over 3,000 enemy troops and have captured or destroyed 1,000 military vehicles, 60 artillery pieces and several thousand tons of ammunition and war material. Hanoi radio on Kissinger's "duplicity" in Vietnam A commentary on Hanoi home service (1430 gmt 20 Mar 75) entitled "Kissinger confesses US crimes", stated that according to Western sources, on 19th March Secretary of State Kissinger - "while busy with his shuttle diplomacy in the Middle East" had stated he would not have negotiated the signing of the Paris agreement on Vietnam had he known that US Congress would not provide the Thieu Administration with additional military aid." This statement the commentator said, exposed the US imperialists, intentions to world public opinion "Kissinger's statement obviously shows that the USA signed the Paris Agreement on Vietnam not with the aim of ending the war of aggression but to use it as a screen to continue its military involvement in South Vietnam. In fact, there is now no one unfamiliar with Kissinger - the man who negotiated the Paris Agreement on Vietnam and initialled it on behalf of the USA, and who attempted to sabotage it from the start." Now the situation was truly a sad one for those who advocated the continuation of war. This had prompted Kissinger to speak his mind, saying that he regretted having negotiated the Paris Agreement. Kissinger's admission once again showed the cunning and brutal face of US imperialism and, at the same time, revealed the hopelessness of the US-Thieu clique's situation in South Vietnam.

Saigon repeats denial of montagnard organization's existence (FE/4856/A3/7) (Text) The Ethnic Development Ministry recently asserted that since the whole FULRO force's return to the Government side on 10th February 1969, there has been no montagnard organization in the Highlands bearing the name of FULRO. However, some Saigon dailies quoted on 14th March an AFP report on the statement of a priest who had just escaped from embattled Ban Me Thuot that the communists and FULRO insurgents had co-operated in the attack on Ban Me Thuot city. The Ethnic Development Ministry stated anew that there exists now no FULRO force; therefore any montagnards present in the communist ranks are montagnard communists who abused the FULRO name to deceive the highlanders. Pathet Lao and DRV View of New Thai Government's Policies

Text of report

According to a news report from Bangkok, the new Thai Government with Khukrit Pramot, leader of the Social Action Party as Premier, was formally set up on 19th March The report indicates that the new Thai Government is composed of Maj-Gen Praman Adireksan, leader of the Thai Nation Party, as deputy Premier and Minister of Defence, Maj-Gen Chatchai Chunhawan as Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Buntheng Thongsawat as Interior Minister The Government delivered its policy statement on domestic and foreign affairs to the House of Representatives on the morning of 19th March and formally received a vote of confidence the same evening

In regard to foreign policy, the new Thai Government announced that it will establish diplomatic ties with the PRC and other socialist countries and that US troops will be withdrawn from Thailand However, the position of the new Thai Government on the issue of the independence and sovereignty of Thailand is still ambiguous.

Regarding domestic policy, it announced that it will continue to extend the declaration of the state of emergency along the border. It does not, however, clearly point out along which part of the border the state of emergency is to be continued, but it is known that it is the border with Laos

In the past, previous Thai Governments had increasingly sent troops to be stationed and to line up along the Lao-Thai border from Ubon Ratchathani to Chiang Rai Provinces Those troops have been stationed in confrontation with Muong Houai Sai District, Vientiane city, Paksane and other areas of Laos. Moreover, they have even ordered their combat launches to violate Lao territorial waters and violently to threaten Lao cargo ships travelling from Paksane to Vientiane.

Excerpts from report of 22nd March 'Nhan Dan' commentary

[Thai Premier's remarks on US troop withdrawal and relations with DRV] "Public opinion takes note of these first policy statements of the new Thai Government. Such statements have partly responded to the aspirations of broad sections of the Thai people for the safeguarding of their national independence and territorial sovereignty and for peace. They also conform to the reality in South-East Asia and the interests of the nations in this region. On the other hand, one cannot fail to note some hesitation and deviousness in these statements. Everybody still remembers that one of the causes that triggered a vote of no-confidence in the Seni Government was its proposal for an 18 month deadline for the removal of US troops, which was regarded by the majority of parliamentarians as too long a period... To get US troops out of Thailand can only serve the interest of peace and the Thai people's sovereignty. The indecisive attitude of the new Thai Government can also be seen in its statement that it is not urging the USA to stop its shipment of arms from Thailand to Phnom Penh. Such an attitude can only help the USA and its henchmen and harm the interests of the Thai and Cambodian peoples"

"On the normalization of relations between the DRV and Thailand", the paper continues, "the position of the DRV Government and the Vietnamese people is perfectly correct and clear The letter of 25th January 1975 of DRV Foreign Minister Nguyen Duy Trinh to his Thai counterpart stated clearly that the DRV side is prepared to negotiate with the Thai side on the normalization of relations between the two countries"

Shigeru Hori, an influential member of the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) said on 20th March at a meeting of the LDP intraparty faction led by Ohira, the Finance Minister, that there was no need for Japanese concern about an anti-hegemony stipulation in the projected Japan-China bilateral peace treaty. This paragraph is reported to be a major stumbling block in current negotiations. Hori said he believed that the word "hegemony" used by the Chinese had no direct link with Japan and noted that the word had been used before in the Chinese-US joint communique. Hori visited China this January and met Premier Chou En-lai and other Chinese leaders. Hori's "positive" view is expected to have considerable impact on the difference of opinions within the LDP. Touching on Japan-Taiwan relations, Hori said that it was impossible for Japan to seek a political solution on recognition of the Taiwan Government and a "technical" solution was the only way for Japan to continue present relations with Taiwan (Kyodo in English 0853 gmt 20 Mar 75).

Korea

Defection of N Korean Army officers The South Korean Defence Ministry announced on 21st March that two North Korean Army officers recently defected to the South at Panmunjom. They were identified as Kim Pu-sung, combat cadre of the KWP liaison department with the rank of major, and Second Lieutenant Yu Tae-yun, platoon commander, Third Company, First Battalion, 30th Regiment, 12th Division, Fifth Army Corps. They said they had to cross the border to escape their impending purge by North Korean authorities. Kim said that in July last year he was placed under Party surveillance for a minor offence and as a security risk. Lt Yu, too, was placed under Party surveillance for his alleged failure to accomplish the combat readiness of his platoon (Haptong in English 0051 gmt 21 Mar 75). At a press conference in Seoul on 21st March, the two defectors said that North Korea started constructing approach tunnels in the demilitarized zone in July 1972 on Kim Il-sung's orders. The purpose of the tunnels was to slip regular armed forces and espionage agents into the South and funnel supplies to North Korean underground agents there. In addition to the two tunnels already discovered, another one was being built four kilometres South-West of Panmunjom 50 m below ground; it was 1.6 m wide, 1.8 m high and 3.5 km long. The North Korean Army was making frantic war preparations; each army corp along the front line was digging several approach tunnels to be used in launching an invasion. They also said that the North Korean people were suffering an acute shortage of food and that they were fed up with Kim Il-sung's monolithic and dictatorial rule (Haptong in English 0232 gmt 21 Mar 75) Asked about rumours that North Korea was planning to invade the South on or about 10th October, the anniversary of the KWP, one of the defectors said that Kim Il-sung had given instructions for the six-year economic plan and the current construction of tunnels to be completed before the Party's anniversary so that war preparations could be ready to realize national reunification. The key areas of the South were to be captured in less than three days because it was expected to take the USA that space of time to start an airlift of its support units (Seoul home service 0300 gmt 21 Mar 75)

Discovery of new "infiltration tunnel" (FE/4858/A3/9) US Army Col Woodside, a spokesman for the UN Command in South Korea, said on 20th March that the UNC would lodge a strong protest and formally charge North Korea with violating the Armistice Agreement following the recent discovery of a tunnel-like cavity in the Southern sector of the demilitarized zone, about 47 km North-East of an infiltration tunnel found in the zone last November. The tunnel, discovered by drilling, was about two metres high and two metres wide, and was thought to extend for about 3 9 km across the demilitarized zone An intercept tunnel was being dug within the Southern section of the zone (Haptong in English 0107 gmt 20 Mar 75). So Song-chol, the South Korean Defence Minister, said that the tunnel was capable of admitting a division-sized force and artillery within an hour to occupy key positions behind South Korean front line units The discovery proved that the North Koreans had completed their preparations to reinvade the South, he said, adding that there was evidence to show that there were at least 10 such tunnels in the demilitarized zone (Haptong in English 0232 gmt 20 Mar 75). At the 361st meeting of the Military Armistice Commission on 20th March, Rear Adml Henry Morgan proposed the formation of a joint team to investigate the discovery He also took the opportunity to expose the discovery of a third tunnel in the demilitarized zone, about four kilometres South-West of Panmunjoin As evidence, he produced a tape-recorded interview with a North Korean defector, Kim Pu-song (see above) (Haptong in English 0812 gmt 20 Mar 75)

Pyongyang home service on 20th March (2230 gmt) carried a KCNA commentary describing the UNC spokesman's statement of that day as a "clumsy fabrication" intended to conceal the fact that of late, the US imperialist aggressors and the Pak Chong-hui clique had been "mobilizing almost daily thousands of personnel and turning the demilitarized zone into a fortress full of tunnels" The whole world knew that the US imperialists were hell-bent, now more than ever before, on speeding up preparations for unleashing another war of aggression against the Korean people. They were continually introducing nuclear and other weapons into South Korea and reinforcing their troops there. The US imperialists and the Pak clique were once again jabbering about a non-existent tunnel while intensifying war preparations and anti-communist repression

N Korean reports of MAC meeting At the 361st MAC meeting on 20th March, Maj-Gen Kim Pung-sop, senior delegation of the DPRK, protested against the build-up of US forces in South Korea, proof, he said, of plans to wreck the armistice and plunge Korea into another war (Pyongyang home service 0205 gmt 20 Mar 75). Maj-Gen Kim also denounced the South Korean and US sides for their acts of piracy on the East and West Seas, and demanded an undertaking that such acts would not be repeated (Pyongyang home service 0502 gmt 20 Mar 75). [Note. The reports did not mention the alleged discovery of new infiltration tunnels.]

MAC security officers' meeting (cf FE/4859/A3/7) A meeting of the security officers to the MAC was held in Panmunjom on 19th March at the request of the DPRK side The DPRK representative protested against the action of a member of the US forces who on the day of the meeting pointed a loaded pistol at North Korean personnel in the joint security area. Moslem Demands for Autonomy

(a) FEBC Manila in English 0800 gmt 22 Mar 75

Text of report

The Mindanao Liberation Front has revealed new suggestions for renewal of talks with the Philippine Government slated for this coming April in Jiddah, Saudi Arabia. From Malacañang, (?Han Brown) reports on the suggestions of the Mindanao Liberation Front from the letter of Muhammad Hasan at-Tuhami, Secretary-General of the Organization of the Islamic Conference, addressed to HE President Ferdinand Marcos [Voice recording] (1) that the Philippine Government makes a prior public declaration that it is agreeable and willing to meet our demands for political autonomy through the creation of an autonomous Bangsa Moro State and Government embracing the whole of Mindanao, Basilan, Sulu and Palawan as put forward in our three-point proposal during the Jiddah meeting from 18th to 29th January 1975.;(2) that the Philippine panel must be authorized or mandated to discuss fully our demands with all its mechanics and details, and (3) that the Philippine panel must be empowered to make formal commitments which shall be binding upon the Philippine Government. The Moro National Liberation Front is decided not to send any representative to Jiddah for the negotiations next April. [recording ends].

At the same time (?Han Brown) reports the [word indistinct] of the Philippine Government in the Jiddah talks as defined by President Marcos. [voice recording] We would like to call attention to our listeners that the President of the Philippines, President Ferdinand E. Marcos last 17th February at the graduation of the Philippine Military Academy in Baguio made the following statement relative to the MNLF demands, and we quote: "He gave three reasons for not accepting the rebels' demands. (1) To accept would be to surrender the sovereignty of the Republic, for the autonomy that the MNLF had in mind is one in which the Philippine Government would have nothing to do with them", (2) there is the undeniable fact that neither the MNLF nor the present leaders can validly lay claim to being sole and legitimate representatives of all Filipino Moslems in the region, and (3) the demands completely disregard present realities, the region over which autonomy is being demanded ("contains) more non rebel Moslems and non-Moslems who collectively constitute the greater majority of the population of the region." [correspondent's sign-off omitted]

Text of report:

Defence Secretary Juan Ponce Enrile today reiterated the Government's stand never to accede to demands for the creation of a separate state in Mindanao. Enrile also reaffirmed the Government's intention to continue to explore all avenues for a peaceful solution to the Mindanao problem. The defence chief emphasized this even as he reported that the military has curbed the expansion of the rebel movement in the south. He further reported that the sporadic fighting in some areas of Mindanao has not affected the socio-economic development programme of the Government and the private sectors of the area. He said that the development of Mindanao Sulu, Basilan, Tawitawi and Palawan is moving forward. Enrile came up with this assessment in a speech read for him by Brig-Gen Alfonso Alcoseba, fourth infantry division commander, at the opening of the Lions International Conference in Cagayan de Oro city today.

In Brief:

Reports of foreign aid to Basilan rebels (Text) The military drive against 4,000 to 5,000 Moslem seccessionist rebels on Basilan island is continuing. Government troops pressing their attacks have captured another rebel stronghold in Sitio Simot in the region. Second Infantry Brigade Commander Col Florencio Magsino reports stiff rebel resistance in Simot. Firearms and a pump boat were captured by the troops. The number of casualties were not reported. Military intelligence is trying to verify reports that foreign artillerymen have landed in Basilan with 105-mm howitzer and are training rebels in the use of the gun. THE FAR EAST

US Policy in Cambodia

(a) Moscow in English for N America 2300 gmt 21 Mar 75

Text of commentary by Pavel Kuznetsov:

The rivalry centres on whether the United States should stand by the unpopular Lon Nol regime or decide on a clear cut finish to American involvement in this country The Aministration believes it scores an irrefutable point with its foreign policy opponents in Congress by pointing out to the so called domino theory. According to this theory the fall of any US backed regime in South East Asia will touch off a chain reaction among other countries, thereby endangering American national security. In my understandig this means that should a country win independence and break away from the way of life and political structure smacked on it either directly by the United States, funds supplied by it or other forms of assistance, it will set an example for a number of other countries. They in turn will also try to shake off American domination or the political stooges who rule them, propped up by bayonets made in the United States.

This same logic suggests that American national interests require support of unpopular minority regimes. If it were otherwise and they did enjoy grass roots support who would threaten to overthrow them? Let s see if and how these generalities apply to Cambodia. The Administration's request for an additional 222 000,000 dollars of aid to Lon Nol has met with little sympathy in Congress on the grounds that it is peanuts compared with billions spent in an unsuccessful attempt to rescue him from the political predicament. And, at the same time the sum is considered too big to be simply thrown away.

Currently under debate there is a compromise solution which provides only 85,000,000 dollars for the regime in exchange for an aid cut off date of 30th June. The very nature of this compromise suggests that vast political segments in the United States have finally arrived at the conclusion that enough is enough and that losing Cambodia, the way some people continue to describe an imminent fall of the Lon Nol Government, has nothing to do with the national interests of the country.

In order not to be carried away by loud but hollow words of compassion to a friendly government, American loyalty and security, some questions must be answered. Such as who is to blame for the bloodshed and instability in Cambodia, and what kind of a democracy is it when the Lon Nol Government, from the very moment it came to power, five years ago after a coup, has existed not due to the people's mandate but on American money and military aid.

In an article on Cambodia, the 'New York Times' wrote that it was impossible to lose Cambodia because to lose it the United States had to possess it. The paper added it was about time the United States rejected such a possessive and unrealistic approach to world problems. It also pointed out the corrupt nature of the regime, its ineffectiveness and unpopularity.

The regime came to power as the result of a coup that was, to say the least, approved by the Central Intelligence Agency. While friction between the executive and legislative branches is a foremost issue in the US media, in my opinion it also indicates that the American public has become extremely sensitive and, I would say, suspicious of the attempts to equate the national interests of their country with interference in the affairs of other countries. The memory of the Vietnam war still smarts in their minds. Incidentally, Cambodia was pushed into that war after Lon Nol came to power. At the time nobody seemed to bother about the fate of thousands of Cambodians. With Lon Nol as an obedient tool in the hands of the US brass, the country was regarded simply as a bridgehead to step up military operations in Indochina. Popular sentiments, to say nothing of compassion, did not count. They were dwarfed by strategic designs.

While breaking of lances over aid to the Lon Nol regime gathers momentum, some officials had rectified the Pentagon's book-keeping errors and found 2½ million dollars in [word indistinct] US aid to Cambodia. This money might prolong the agony for another two months and Cambodia's Premier, Long Boret, is waiting for Congress to vote on the aid request, otherwise he cannot form a Government. And, to be honest, I simply do not see where American national interests come in.

Text of commentary by Sergey Bulavtsev

Cambodian patriots are marking the fifth anniversary of the formation of the National United Front and the People's Armed Forces of National Liberation of Cambodia with new military successes in the struggle for an independent, peaceful, neutral, democratic and prosperous homeland.

Five years ago Prince Norodom Sihanouk announced the formation of the National United Front of Cambodia and of the National Liberation Army for the struggle against the anti people, pro-imperialist clique which organized the coup d'etat. For five years and especially during the past six months, the Cambodian patriots have achieved great successes. Until now they have liberated over 90 per cent of the territory with four fifths of the country's population.

The incursion of American and Saigon soldiers the half million tons of bombs dropped from American aircraft on the liberated areas the vast military and economic aid to the Lon Nol regime from the USA, none of it is has broken the patriots courage. They are now conducting military operations in the approaches to the capital and have besieged Phnom Penh in a tight circle. The patriots have severed all the land and water routes by which the Lon Nol clique received injections of US arms and munitions. The 'air bridge' set up by the USA to provide urgent aid to Phnom Penh is capable only of prolonging the agony of the anti people regime.

It is characteristic that a growing number of Americans, including congressmen are beginning to understand the hopelessness of supporting Lon Nol.

In their struggle to end foreign intervention and liquidate the reactionary pro Western regime, the Cambodian patriots have always relied and continue to rely on the support of the USSR, of all socialist countries and progressive forces of the world. In the USSR the National United Front and the Royal Government of National Unity of Cambodia are regarded as the genuine leaders and lawful representatives of the Cambodian people. "The Soviet Union, said Leonid Brezhnev, General Secretary of the CPSU Central Committee, at the celebrations in Ulan Bator, comes out consistently for the ending of the war in Cambodia in accordance with the basic hopes of the patriotic forces of that country."

Friendship with the peoples of the neighbouring countries of Vietnam and Laos has great importance for the successful conclusion of the struggle of the Cambodian patriots. The mutual help of the three peoples of Indochina plays an important role in their joint struggle against imperialist intrigues, for the right to decide their fate for themselves.

Uighur Broadcast: Troop Distributions in Minority Areas

Editorial report on item broadcast by Tashkent in Uighur for Sinkiang at 1430 gmt 16 Feb 75 entitled "The practice of forcible assimilation" (SU/4861/A3/6):

The press and radio in the national minority regions of China were trying to create the impression that the revised Constitution had been welcomed by the people, whereas, not a single Article in it referred to the existence of non-Chinese peoples in China For example, there was the role of the Chinese People's Liberation Army (PLA) an important issue for Sinkiang, Inner Mongolia and other national minority regions According to Article 15 of the revised Constitution the PLA carried out the directives of the Party This purports to mean that the Army is the protector of the Chinese peoples However the Army is at present an oppressor not a protector of the peoples in the national minority regions."

The commentary went on to say that the PLA had "usurped" from non Chinese farmers the most fertile lands had centralized and now controlled agricultural production, "poked its nose" into industrial production, restricted cultural activities, purged all local representatives from Party and other administrative organs and had placed all authority in the hands of the illegally constituted revolutionary committees, which were controlled by Chinese soldiers and civilians.

The commentary said "The number of Chinese troops in the national minority regions continues to increase. For example, there are about 1,000,000 Chinese troops in Sinkiang, 300,000 in Tibet, and over (?1,000,000) in Inner Mongolia.' These troops were stationed in central areas of the national minority regions in order to oppress the national minorities, whose dissatisfaction had led to several uprisings in Sinkiang, Tibet, and Inner Mongolia in the past but which had all been suppressed ruthlessly.

In addition to punishing the local peoples, the PLA had another task. "This other task is the provision of all round assistance to the Chinese immigrants into the national minority regions. In recent years 3,000,000 Chinese immigrants have been resettled in Sinkiang and 4,000,000 in Inner Mongolia. None of them can speak the local languages. Although they are young they are not given jobs that require physical labour. With the help of the PLA, they have been placed in leadership positions in the labour production brigades."

Such abuse by the PLA and the inhuman treatment it meted out to the non-Chinese peoples had caused great resentment and dissatisfaction among the national minorities. "This has led to several uprisings against the PLA in the national minority regions. The clashes that occurred in Sinkiang even worried the Chungnanhai."

The commentary continued. "The new Constitution gives wide (?powers) to the PLA for all its activities. Its main activity, which is the oppression it carries out in the national minority regions, is run in accordance with the directives of the Peking leaders. In aiding the forcible assimilation of the national minorities the PLA is in fact implementing the directives of the Chungnanhai."

"Millions of Uighurs, Mongols, Tibetans, and other non-Chinese peoples in China want to preserve their identity and develop their economy and culture to their fullest extent. However, a handful of ultra-nationalist Chinese chauvinists in Chungnanhai want the non-Chinese peoples to become Chinese and to turn their ancient heritage into a possession of Mao Tsetung. The Mao Tsetung hordes are using [words indistinct] and the PLA for the forcible assimilation of the non-Chinese peoples. And yet the revised Constitution says that the PLA [words indistinct] protects the interests of the peoples in China."

[Note. At 1530 gmt on 19th February the radio carried a poorly received commentary giving figures in support of the claim that the Soviet Union provides excellent educational facilities for the Uighurs and Kazakhs in the USSR. The Chinese deprived the non-Chinese peoples of a proper education.]

Text of report Pravda article by Mikhail Georgyev

'Pravda points out today that 'from behind the high walls of the former residence of Chinese emperors" anti Soviet attacks and malignities are launched and grounds are sought to poison the atmosphere in Europe Thus the newspaper writes that the Hsinhua agency supported a campaign launched by Vienna right wing newspapers with a view to questioning the neutrality policy pursued by Austria. Peking extremely liked the questionable idea of creating NATO's allied forces in the North Sea. With what aim in view does Peking propaganda resorts to new provocations?

In an answer to this question 'Pravda's' commentator, Mikhail Georgyev, writes "The explanation is quite simple. Real changes are taking place in Europe in the cause of reaching agreement on major international questions And this is what Peking leaders dread most of all. They in no way want to reconcile themselves to the successes of the peaceful foreign policy of the Soviet Union, of other progressive forces. They try in every way to put spokes in the wheels of the work of the all-European conference on security and co operation, try to interfere in the Vienna talks on mutual reduction of armaments and armed forces in Central Europe. For this they do not scruple to enter into direct deal with the most reactionary politicians of the West."

As Mikhail Georgyev points out, "The Hsinhua agency in its commentaries thoroughly conceals with what and by whom the sources of its information are poisoned. It is clear to everyone that the agency either invents anti Soviet slander itself or receives it from the foes of peace and security of peoples, i.e. draws from an impure turbid source."

In Brief

Thailand and arms transit to Cambodia (Text) The Government of Thailand has decided to put an end to the use of its country as a base for transport of arms to Cambodia. Deputy Prime Minister of Thailand, Praman Adireksan, stressed in Parliament that Thailand will not interfere in the internal affairs of a neighbouring country. The United States is known to be using Thailand as a trans-shipping point for supplying the Lon Nol regime with arms and military equipment. Nevertheless the Peking leaders, who loudly proclaim their support of the Cambodian patriots, are in favour of preserving US military presence in Thailand. During the visit of former Foreign Minister of Thailand, Chatchai Chunhawan, to Peking the Chinese leaders stressed that they see no necessity for evacuating US armed forces from Thailand. Study of dictatorship of proletariat in China Broadcasts from Chinese provincial radio stations indicate that the population does not display any enthusiasm over the current campaign calling on it to study the theory of the dictatorship of the proletariat. Rank-and-file Chinese cannot understand why they have to criticize some mythical class enemies again who don't seem to have been done away with by previous campaigns. It is clear to the workers that the campaign constitutes another threat to their living standards. ("Radio Peace and Progress" in English 0900 gmt 21 Mar 75)

C. HUNGARIAN PARTY CONGRESS

Proceedings on 21st March

Editorial report

MTI and Budapest radio reported the resumption on 21st March, the fifth day of the Congress, of the debate on the reports of the Central Committee and the Central Control Commission.

At the beginning of the Session Academician Istvan Friss, who was in the chair recalled the establishment of the Hungarian Republic of Councils in 1919. At that time he said, the proletariat gained power by peaceful means, because the leaders of the bourgeoisie realized that their position was hopeless. The bourgeoisie in the rest of Europe watched the events in Hungary with fear and because of its isolation in Central Europe, International imperialism succeeded in strangling the Hungarian dictatorship of the proletariat. Two and a half decades of oppression and exploitation followed, but in the end the victories of the Soviet Army liberated Hungary and the working class created its unified Party and came to power. The present Congress remembered with pride and gratitude those who paved the way 56 years ago. (MTI 2115 and in English 1005 gmt 21 Mar 75)

Speeches by Hungarian delegates and leaders of foreign delegations were made during the day, ending with a winding up speech by Janos Kadar (see below). Budapest radio stated (home service 1600 gmt that 143 delegates had applied to speak but, owing to pressure of time, only 57 had been able to address the Congress. It had therefore been decided that the remainder should limit their speeches in writing to the Congress Secretariat which would forward their views to the newly elected Central Committee.

After Kadar's speech, the Congress unanimously approved the report of the Central Committee and Janos Kadar's winding-up speech; the Programme Declaration, including amendments; the amendments to the Organizational Statute; the draft Resolution including amendments; and the report of the Central Control Commission. (Budapest home service 1800 and MTI 1840 gmt 21 Mar 75)

During the day Edward Gierek, First Secretary of the Polish United Workers' Party, and Erich Honecker, First Secretary of the SED Central Committee, were reported to have left Hungary. The leadership of the Polish delegation was taken over by Josef Pinkowski, Secretary of the PZPR Central Committee; and the leadership of the GDR delegation by Hermann Axen, member of the SED Politburo. Speeches by Foreign Delegates on 21st March

MTI (a) 1515 gmt (b) 1530 gmt 21 Mar 75

Precis with quotations of reports:

(a) Bruno Kuster, Secretary of the Bureau of the Socialist Unity Party of West Berlin (SEW), said "that the SEW was conducting a continuous struggle for the workers' vital interests, against monopoly capital and reaction. Nowadays the anti-communist campaign and the campaign of slander have reached a new peak in West Berlin. The ruling circles are again trying to obstruct the implementation of the agreement about West Berlin and to foment a cold war atmosphere. For our part, we regard compliance with the agreement on West Berlin as binding. We wish for good and settled relations with the

FRG, the GDR, the Soviet Union, the Hungarian People's Republic and other States of the Socialist community "Finally, Bruno Kuster declared We feel that we are bound with close ties to the HSWP".

Juan Gomez, Secretary of the Executive Committee of the Spanish CP, said "The fight for freedom and proletarian internationalism is a tradition common to our Party's peoples. Communist, Hungarian revolutionaries fought in our country in the ranks of the glorious International brigades, and our people treasure in their hearts the names of Mate Zalka and Gen Lukacs who had died as heroes fighting for the Spanish people's freedom." He added that the achievements of the socialist countries were a valuable help in the anti capitalist struggle and the struggle for the promotion of international detente and the maintenance of peace. [Indistinct passage referring to the global struggle of the anti-imperialist revolutionary progressive forces and their counterparts in Spain, whose struggle was headed by the working class.] Their struggle was supported by the broadest strata of society. The political process is accelerating dramatically and even the Church had openly declared its aloofness from the regime in power. "The formation of the Spanish Democratic Junta has had a very great impact on the struggle, which gives expression to the interests of the people, the working class as well. The Junta advocates peaceful, democratic changes which would make possible the liquidation of the dictatorship and avoidance of a new civil war. The influence and prestige of the Spanish CP is growing fast.

"In line with the principles of proletarian internationalism we wholeheartedly support the Portuguese peoples (?victorious) struggle. We advocate the earliest possible conclusion of the Conference on Security and Co-operation in Europe and, in accordance with the principles adopted at the consultative conference in Warsaw, we are also making our contribution to the preparation of the conference of European communist and workers' parties. The crisis of capitalism is becoming more and more acute, and parallel with the process the importance of unity among the progressive parties is growing. We maintain that, from wherever anti communism and anti Sovietism may emanate, they run counter to the interests of the working class and proletarian internationalism."

Ermenegildo Gasperoni, Chairman of the San Marino Communist Party, was the next speaker "While the imperialist and capitalist world is beset with a grave and deep economic, political, social and moral crisis, socialism is marching victoriously ahead, he said, and added that the movements of the popular masses were bringing about important changes in international life, paving the way to making anti-imperialist action possible on a broader scale, promoting the spread of the process of detente, peaceful coexistence and the realization of European security and co-operation. "Imperialism finds itself in a grave situation, which can be seen from the crisis of the financial system, the decline in industrial production, the oil crisis, growing unemployment, and the worsening of the workers' living conditions." All these phenomena rendered the class struggle more acute, and shifted the balance of power throughout the world in favour of peace and freedom for the peoples and the cause of peaceful coexistence. The socialist countries, headed by the Soviet Union, support the forces fighting against imperialism and for world peace and are enhancing thereby the strength of the revolutionary movement of the working class and all national liberation movements and helping to make the struggle of communist and workers' parties in the capitalist countries successful. The socialist countries and all the fraternal parties must resolutely oppose all manifestations of anti-Sovietism."

"Franz Duebi, member of the Politburo of the Swiss Party of Labour, referring to the approaching 30th anniversary of the victory over fascism, pointed out that Switzerland had been spared by the war, but Swiss communists are proud that, by their solidarity and support for communists fighting in illegality in Hitlerite Germany and fascist Italy, they were able to make a contribution to the anti-fascist struggle. The Swiss Party has always been and will remain true to the principles of proletarian internationalism. He went on to say that the era of the big economic boom is over in Switzerland as well. For abour six months now more and more factories were closing, in many factories lay offs were being announced, or they were going on short time working, workers' wages were being cut. Discontent was increasing in the ranks of the workers, who had not been forced to fight hard for decades. They were now becoming more and more resolute in their opposition to measures injurious to the workers. Since its 10th Congress the Swiss Party of Labour had launched a popular drive against inflation, and within a short time had collected signatures registering protest by nearly 100,000 Swiss citizens. We, communists, know that the struggle for a new Switzerland will be long and hard. In the struggle for a fundamental transformation of our society our Party is marching together with the socialist countries, the communists of the capitalist world, the progressive forces of Asia, Africa and Latin America and the peoples becoming liberated from imperialist oppression". . .

(b)Per Israelsson, member of the Central Committee of the Swedish Party of the Left (Communist) spoke of the situation in the Nordic countries. "The short term objective of the Swedish Party is to improve the position of the people, and in the long term it aims at changing the social system in such a way as to facilitate a transition to socialism. The common goal of our Parties and peoples is to secure a lasting peace in Europe and the world. We believe in the superiority of the socialist system and the possibility of peaceful coexistence. Our Party is struggling in defence of Sweden's policy of neutrality and for the prevention of any economic link which would threaten her neutrality."

I. Bilen, Secretary General of the Turkish CP, spoke about the situation in his country, which had been hit by a prolonged crisis because of its membership of NATO. "The reactionary ruling circles have resorted to various oppressive measures to stamp out the worker, peasant and youth movements, which are gaining strength, a state of emergency has been declared, the Army has been ordered to fight the people, and Governments dependent on the bourgeoisie have been set up. But they still could not attain their objective, on the contrary, the contrasts and the crisis have further deepened. The inner struggles of the bourgeoisie have been aggravated to such an extent that now even the formation of a Government is a problem. The Government crisis has now lasted for months. The aim of the Turkish CP is to organize the struggle of the masses, to form its own organization among the workers in the factories and workshops. It has advocated the territorial integrity and sovereignty of the Republic of Cyprus, demanded the withdrawal of foreign troops from the island and the liquidation of the bases. The Turkish people want peace and security in this area. The Turkish CP supports to the full the initiatives of the USSR aimed at reducing tension and at strengthening peace and security. Finally he stressed the need that, after the conference of the European fraternal parties, a further world-wide forum of the communist and workers' parties should be convened."

Hungarian Speakers on 21st March

Abstract of reports:

Mrs Janos Keserue, Minister of Light Industry, reporting on the reconstruction of light industry, said that machinery had been renewed, buildings modernized and production increased. More clothes, shoes, furniture and paper and printing industry products had been supplied to the population; exports had been almost doubled, and progress had been made in modernizing products. She said: "We know that light industrial products do not as yet satisfy every consumer, and more decisive action is needed in improving both domestic supplies and exports. It is becoming more and more a matter of course that industry and commerce have to act together and not separately. Thus all sections of the population can, in keeping with their financial resources and demands, find the product they are looking for, and exports can become more and more effective. This is still not always the case, but nowadays industry and commerce spend less time levelling accusations against each other." (Budapest home service 0900 gmt 21 Mar 75)

Istvan Gergely, First Secretary of County Szolnok Party Committee, spoke about the processing of agricultural produce and the responsibilities of management. He said managers were made not born, and should improve in the course of their work. Confidence should rest not in individual managers, but in policies, and if any manager thought otherwise, those around him should cure him of these delusions. Demotion would not doubt help to restore any manager's sense of perspective. Those, however, who had worked hard for some time and, because of old age, could no longer keep pace with increasing demands should receive their just reward from society (Budapest home service 1100 gmt 21 Mar 75) He also said "In our country today the main problem is no longer whether or not there is enough wheat, meat or eggs. Our progress now depends more and more on whether or not we have adequate capacity to process agricultural produce and store the products" (MTI 1345 gmt 21 Mar 75).

Academician Otto Benedikt, scientific adviser to the Computer Research Institute of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences, noted that one of his own proposals had been incorporated in the part of the draft resolution which concerned science. As for shop floor democracy, he said that many workers failed to use the opportunities open to them (MTI 1345 gmt 21 Mar 75). In order to encourage shop floor democracy, "he proposed an amendment to the draft resolution suggesting that those exercising criticism be better protected from reprisals" (MTI in English 1700 gmt 21 Mar 75)

Dr Imre Kuricz, First Secretary of the Budapest Fifth District Party Committee said that the two front struggle of the HSWP had been and would remain the main guarantor of success. "There are people who maintain that the two front struggle has had its day and, even if it had to be kept up for a time after 1956, it is no longer necessary. Yet, it is still not enough to fight against those who might try to raise their hand against the regime, one must also fight against those who abuse power. It is not enough to combat the greedy, egalitarianism must also be banished" (MTI 1345 gmt 21 Mar 75)

Peter Varga, First Secretary of County Somogy Party Committee, said it had been proposed in many places that Party discipline should be made stricter and defaulters called to account. He also spoke of industrial development in the country and protection of the environment at holiday resorts.

Janos Dojcsak, general manager of Diosgyoer engineering works, gave details of the fulfilment of the Five-Year Plan at the works, the proportion of goods for export would increase from 32 to 44 per cent, and profits were increasing on average by 10 3 per cent a year. (MTI 1605 gmt 21 Mar 75)

Imre Toth, Secretary of the Party Committee at the Ministry of Building and Urban Development, noted with pleasure that the Central Committee's report to the Congress counted the implementation of plans for housing and revolutionary changes in building processess among the country's successes. He mentioned rising building costs as one problem. "He made the point that . . . building workers did not always receive from public opinion the appreciation to which they were entitled, because they have to do their jobs in below-average living and working conditions."

Dr Imre Rozsa, a surgeon, while noting the improvements in health services since the 10th Congress, said that there were still too few doctors whose main activities were devoted to industrial establishments, and that there were too few specialist surgeries. "Party organizations concerned with health have been, in the past few years, pre-occupied with ethical problems. The speaker emphasized that the politically most advanced members of the medical community ought to act against the practice of expressing gratitude by means of cash and gifts which has become widespread in the health sector. In his opinion far more attention ought to be paid at medical faculties to ethics and the education of medical students to a sense of vocation."

Andras Czidor, in charge of shunting at Zahony station, said that in 1948 the station handled only 200,000 tons of goods, and in 1974 more than 16,000,000 tons - 12 per cent of all the goods handled by Hungarian railways.

Jozsef Javorszky, welder at the Ganz-Mavag factory, said that most workers were beginning to take part in management. The workers expected to be informed about the state of their factory, and expected managers to act on their comments and suggestions. Shop-floor democracy, however, was lagging behind the total development of society. At meetings with workers, managers often confined themselves to reminding the workers of their duties, but avoided mentioning their own. He said that in his factory a major problem was the lack of basic education among a large proportion of the staff. (MTI 1610 gmt 21 Mar 75)

Imre Gyoeri, Secretary of the Central Committee and chairman of the drafting committee reported on the work of the drafting committee in preparing the draft resolution of the Congress and the organizational Statues. He said that there had been more than 3,000 proposals concerning the draft Congress directives in the debates preceding the Congress and almost as many proposals concerning the draft organizational Statutes. From these the Central Committee and the Politburo had made use of several hundred. Apart from the conferences of Party groups, at Party meetings almost 200,000 Party members had expressed their views on the documents and on Party policy. (MTI 1830 gmt 21 Mar 75)

Miklos Ovari [Secretary of the Central Committee], reporting on the draft Programme Declaration, said that the editorial committee elected by the Congress had completed its work. In the preliminary debate more than 1,000 comments and suggestions had been made, most of which had been taken into account in the present text. "Comrade Mrs Jozsef Szaloki has spoken about the fact that for the young people of today even the Programme Declaration of 1948 is part of history, and she added that the Programme Declaration to be approved now provides tasks of a historic importance for the young generation of today. We communists do not in general like to use big words, we value more plain, everyday deeds. However, I believe now that Comrade Mrs Szaloki is right. The creation of a developed socialist society is the great historic task of the generations living in Hungary at present..."

He noted that the developed socialist society was to be built not only for posterity but also for the present generation, and added "The construction of a developed socialist society is the programme of the HSWP today. Tomorrow, in the near future, this will undoubtedly be the programme of our entire people. The construction of a developed socialist society is not merely Hungary's cause, however, a developed socialist society is not only being built in Hungary. Comrade Brezhnev stressed with reason the significance of the collective efforts and joint experiences of the sister Parties."

Ovari concluded. "Naturally, we would have prepared a programme even if the general crisis of capitalism had not intensified in recent years. However, in the present situation our Programme Declaration may have an important role in the ideological struggle taking place between capitalism and socialism. Our Programme Declaration is one of the replies given by the socialist world to the great issues of our age. Our further reply will be not only the planning but also the realization of the gigantic work of constructing a developed socialist society..." (MTI 1840 gmt 21 Mar 75)

Winding-up Speech by Janos Kadar

(a) Budapest home service 2000 gmt 21 Mar 75

Text of recordings:

Esteemed Congress, dear Comrades: the four-day joint debate on the report of the Central Committee and the report of the Central Control Committee was elevating. Fifty-seven Congress delegates spoke in that debate. All of the comrades who have spoken, without exception accepted the Central Committee's report and supported the proposal submitted to Congress by the Central Committee. First of all, I express thanks for this to the comrades who have spoken in the debate.

Secondly, in this connection, I would like to stress that this attitude was also an expression of what is one of our main sources of strength: the complete ideological and political unity of our Party.

The comrades who spoke in the debate, the message of the debate and the debate in general may be characterized by saying that it was a debate about achievements, it evaluated results appropriately; it mentioned shortcomings, it was a critical and self-critical debate and laid great emphasis on tasks to be resolved, the methods of solution, the things to be done.

In my view the debate had a revolutionary spirit in the sense that it was marked by an absolute consistency of principle and readiness for action. The debate also had a peculiar aspect which probably affected all participants. In my opinion at this Congress a new Communist generation which is growing up presented itself and it presented itself well. It is difficult to distinguish in this because many young people have made speeches and this is encouraging but if I am to give just a few examples a woman comrade from County Bacs, a member of the Communist Youth Union, made a speech on the first day of the debate. In the middle of the debate we heard a young theatre director from Szolnok and today, on the concluding day of the debate we heard a building worker from Fehervar. I could carry on in this way. I believe this is a great thing for the Party.

In the appropriate document we stress that our Party's strength lies, among other things, in the fact that three generations of Communist revolutionaries are living and struggle together in unity here. From this point of view I was greatly impressed by the speech of Comrade Benedikt, one of the founder members of our Party, who perhaps represents a different style from that of the young people mentioned earlier, the style of long standing revolutionaries. He was critical, concrete, principled and open he said what he agreed with and what he was glad about, he complained about what had not been taken into account and also gave a general appraisal. I mention this separately because it was very frequently voiced here that today we can learn from one another. I would suggest that we should learn from the generation of old revolutionaries the enthusiasm and fire of youth which enabled him to stand up here after 57 years' struggle as if he had only just begun his struggle for the working class.

It must be said that those who have contributed to the debate have had a good backing: they could feel the contact and the agreement and approval of the entire Congress during their speeches. However, we possess a far bigger backing than that. The work of our Congress was followed, and I daresay actively supported, with action by the Hungarian working class and the Hungarian people building socialism. You could sense this from the announcements of the Presidium: I do not know exactly but well over 1,000 telegrams, messages and letters and words expressing approval have been addressed to us, and not only to the whole body. Those who sent them have even congratulated individual speakers and expressed their approval of them. What is very important in these messages and views is the fact that very few of the messages and views have been confined to words. even now, in the days of the Congress, the work of the Congress has been supported with new pledges and acts. Well, this is the background to which our Congress has worked and that is why our Congress can feel its strength.

Nevertheless, we have worked with an even bigger background. It sounds a cliche, but it is not a platitude to say that the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party, which is a patriotic Party, is also a proletarian internationalist Party. In our view our Party is responsible for all its actions to the Hungarian working class, the Hungarian people, as well as to the international working class and to our class brothers waging their struggle in the world. And it is with great pleasure that I mention that each of our 29 fraternal parties, functioning under the most diverse conditions, declared that they regarded the activities of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party as being in accordance with Marxist-Leninist principles; and this is of tremendous importance to us.

I believe that neither I nor the rest of us here, collectively, could undertake to deal in detail with the numerous and serious matters raised during the debate for, were we to do so, we should be starting the Congress all over again; because the debate included no substantial Congress subject which has not been touched upon. However, allow me to restate a few important matters now, at the conclusion of this debate, because this can have significance for us.

After the four-day deliberations of the Congress after these four days of work - when we have touched upon all sectors of Party activity in the debate, as regards the results I believe the first thing that the Congress, in appropriate form and words, will be able to set out as the result of the major effort and struggle, the result of our people's constructive effort, is that the Hungarian People's Republic is economically and culturally developed, a country which can offer an assured, acceptable and improving livelihood to working people, and that the Hungarian People's Republic is a socialist country. That is our people's biggest historic achievement.

The Congress can note, after four days of deliberations, after illumination of the question from many aspects, that in the Hungarian People's Republic the power of the Hungarian working class is asserted and is expressive of the whole people's interests, it represents and enforces them.

I would like to add that the power of the working class must be understood literally - it is a class power. I am putting emphasis on this because in the last few years we have been preoccupied a great deal with problems of the workers, with the leading role of the working class, questions of the workers' power, and, obviously, we shall go on being preoccupied with this.

Public mentality here is developing fast, but our terminology is not always keeping abreast with it. I would like to note this again. The power which exists in Hungary, which prevails and is effective, the power which governs the whole life of this people, is the power of the working class. It is not the power of individuals - not even of individual workers. In the assertion and day-to-day exercise of the power of the working class there are posts of power, a very considerable part of these powerful posts is filled by workers. However, the power is not their power, not theirs personally - it is the power of the working class and they have been entrusted to assure, defend and enforce the power of the working class. As far as they, personally, are concerned, it is not power, but service.

It has been very accurately expressed throughout the deliberations of the Congress that the allied classes which constitute the basis of our society have drawn closer to one another in every respect: in political outlook, ideologically, where labour relations are concerned, in all respects. It can be stated that the working class, having grown up to its historic tasks, has, in the most recent period, continued to develop. It can be stated that our ally - the Hungarian peasantry - having set out on the road of socialism has made tremendous strides of progress. It has ideologically and politically drawn closer to the working class, We can state that recently the intelligentsia, too, having identified itself with socialism in its outlook as well as its mentality and political attitude, has drawn substantially closer to the working class.

Among the basic social issues - or, I might say, the particularly important social issues which I feel one has to mention - I wish to single out two, for they received attention commensurate with their importance in the Congress debate as well as in the speeches of those who contribute to it.

One of them is the situation of women in our society. I would like to confine myself here to saying that even here, in the Congress hall, one could sense that the social position of women has improved considerably in recent years; and that the Party must do everything to make it improve and develop further. The sum up, the main way to achieve this, as I see it, is that the Party's work and the activities of our State as regards the protection of the mother, the child and the family, the easing of household chores and in allied sectors, must continue. This is the starting point for further development as far as women are concerned. Very serious attention must also be paid in future to the vocational training of women and the unfailing application of the principle of equal pay for equal work. That, perhaps, is the second most important principle.

The third principle I would like to mention, and I will put it very concisely, is that women should be put into leading posts; I am referring to the Party mass organizations, State offices, economic posts, posts in cultural life and to every sphere where this can be implemented and is possible. I dare to put this so categorically that women should be put into leading posts - because unfortunately so far one does not have to fear that this will be carried to excess.

Serious effort is needed in this sphere. We have done more than a little - and here I am naturally thinking first and foremost of the Party and our State, of factories and enterprises in the past four years, but this work has to be continued forcefully and steadily, and we must not rest on the laurels of the successes so far attained in this field. And I would like to join the contributor who said he is not discussing the issue of women because the UN has decided that it is women's year and on similar grounds, but because this is tantamount to one of the fundamental issues of our society and, I will add, of our socialist revolution, too. It is an old Marxist proposition that the progressive nature of a society can safely be measured by the position of women in that society. If socialist society is the most progressive society, and this is so, and this is what we know and believe then this must accordingly be made manifest in the social situation of women, too.

The other issue which I wanted to raise among some of the fundamental issues of our society is the issue of socialist youth. It is my profound conviction, and this can be maintained on the basis of things heard and experienced here in the past four days, that the situation is better and that we have progressed in the sphere of youth work in the past four and a half years, not only because a Youth Law has been enacted prescribing many concrete measures this is one reason, as this was needed, but also because - and many think little of it, but it can be the most important - we have progressed in our view of young people. In other words one should not deal with the issue of youth in an abstract manner, but should use the class approach of the Marxist method, because if we view it purely mechanically and not in the Marxist way, then we shall make no progress at all.

Of course everyone is familiar with the old views, mediaeval views and even older ones. Those who concern themselves with issues of this nature know that writings over 2,200 years old have remained from the Romans and even the Greeks, in which someone who dealt with issues of this kind, generally an older man, spoke about young people. And in these writings of over 2,200 years ago the statement about youth goes more or less like this. youth is degenerate, pleasure-seeking, does not respect its elders, etc. This text has not changed, and therefore one cannot look at this subjectively, cannot view it subjectively. This has to be viewed in a Marxist and socialist manner. And naturally problematical issues will always arise between the generations as regards attire, clothing, hairstyle and I don't know what else, and it could well be that if one is in one's 80s it does appear that a 19-year-old is pleasure-seeking and one cannot exclude this possibility. But we really do have to view and judge our youth by how they meet their fundamental obligations, how they behave with regard to social issues and how they study and work.

Well, things which one does not like very much may often be seen. Nevertheless, if anyone were to estimate - if it were possible to estimate statistically - the proportion of pledges and achievements in the Congress and liberation labour competitions made by the age group which we call youth then, I believe, everyone would be surprised by the high proportion of it undertaken and fulfilled by Hungarian youth. This is what our appraisal should be. It is not a matter of shutting our eyes to things, no. Here again there is a need for constant, regular and appropriate contact with young people by the Party, society, school and at the place of employment and in the family. It is indispensable to deal with youth in the appropriate way. I believe everyone can realize from their personal lives as well as their surroundings that if the young are taken seriously, then they are serious: if they are not taken seriously, then they show that they can be frivolous as well. Here, too, mutual trust applies.

So I think that we have made progress on this point, too, and here again our task is the same as that regarding the transformation of the social position of women: we must continue intensively, regularly and constantly to deal appropriately with youth. I believe that the Youth Law must be implemented, its objectives must be realized, and in the field of education and training what is indispensable must be achieved, namely that Hungarian youth should be fit to understand the objectives which have been debated by the Congress and to fulfil them as well. Besides this, I regard as the most important recipe, especially the pedagogic recipe, the allocation of assignments, tasks and work. It is commonly known how happy a young child is when he is given even the most insignificant assignment and is able to fulfil it. This is the way in which man lives and develops and even more so do young people the young should be given bigger tasks with greater courage and trust.

Not long ago a delegation from a socialist country paid a visit to us. It went to one of our big industrial collectives and said that there was a very strong collective there. I am not going to name the collective now, lest their success should go to their heads. Yet I saw that collective in an extremely weak state eight years ago. What cured the collective in question? They were cured by being given such a hard task in the field of development that when they first heard about it they thought they were going to lose their senses. However they have fought through and grown up, and a collective of several thousand members can no longer recognize themselves. Man, and youth too, grows up by fulfilling tasks.

So, thinking of these main issues of the debate and thinking of the basic issues and state of our society I would like to conclude by saying that I think that all those present could become convinced of the fact that when the 11th Congress of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party determines the construction of a developed socialist society, the revolutionary vanguard of the Hungarian working class, the HSWP, is prepared and ripe for this great task, and the working class itself is prepared and ripe for this great task, and the Hungarian people are prepared and ripe.

I would like to turn to a few of the stands taken during the joint debate on the two points of the agenda. The first and most important - this is naturally something which Congress has yet to declare by resolution, although the debate of the Congress has already made it clear and the stands taken have revealed it - that the Party's main political guideline has been confirmed. I dare add that this main political guideline has been further developed and enriched in the course of the Congress campaign and here, during the working days of the Congress as well. This is a great thing, it will be the fundamental political decision of the Congress, if it does take this decision.

I would like to dwell upon this because six months ago or more, before the basic document of the Congress, the Congress Guiding Principles were published, for various reasons there was a great deal of guessing going on: Will the HSWP change its policy? Will it carry on or alter it? It goes without saying that it was the West that was preoccupied with that question; but among us, too, there were people who, to say the least, started wondering. I believe that the Congress debate has provided a clear answer as to how the main line of the policy of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party will develop.

In one of the intervals during the Congress I was fortunate to meet a group of invited guests whom we have described - for lack of a better description - public figures; they included a number of our allies and friends outside the Party, fellow fighters. You know how long an interval is: that is all the time we had to talk. We raised a few subjects in an informal discussion; I mentioned the Party policy issue because, naturally, these friends of ours were thinking about it. I referred to the earlier rumours of all sorts - such as that the Party line would harden; some sort of a new dictatorship lay ahead. I reassured them that there is no question of any new kind of dictatorship: the old, the dictatorship of the proletariat will stay. I pointed out that our esteemed friends had experienced its translation into practice day by day over a period of roughly 18 years, that they knew it and saw it and were aware that it is not a bad dictatorship. It is a dictatorship under which one can live, one can be freely creative; every honest person can acquire a status under it.

The debate has confirmed the continuation of our Party's foreign policy guideline. We were able to hear also speakers who did not speak on their own behalf exclusively, but on behalf of those who had sent them, who had given them their mandate, and, I believe, the guiding principles had already thrown a lot of light on the subject for the benefit of those who had doubts, perhaps. And now, the Congress and the Draft Resolution have provided clear answers. Thus, the well-intentioned as well as the ill-mannered enquirer can take note that the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party will continue along its Marxist Leninist course, its socialist communist policy, its internationalist policy, its policy in line with the people's interests. This will be the principal the most important decision of the Congress. It has been well supplemented here during the debate, with another demand something to which I had also referred in the Central Committee s Report but which you could hear voiced much more strongly here, in the debate at the Congress The demand is not only that the Party should carry on with its policy as before, that it should retain its main political guideline and should develop its policy in the same direction the other demand posed here as one of equal importance we have all heard it together has been for uniform interpretation and uniform, consistent implementation of policy That is demanded by our Party members our working class, all sincere believers in socialism and we can say that it is demanded by our people too

A few words about economic and cultural construction. I believe the debate at the Congress has also proved that what the Central Committee has reported in this connection has been a realistic assessment of the situation, a realistic picture of the situation, and that the Central Committee put forward realistic objectives to the esteemed Congress. The Central Committee has also expressed demands of that nature before the esteemed Congress. In the field of economic and cultural construction, regarding living standards, our plan for 1975 has been completed and we have to do our best for its proper fulfilment I once again ask Congress to endorse the principal indices of the new Five-year Plan. You have heard Comrade Gyoeri say that we cannot as yet announce details because the new Five-year Plan is still in the process of elaboration and will be put before the competent Party organ at the right time in the course of the year. But, should Congress so decide, a few main data will form the basis of the work ahead and will determine its whole character and framework. Due fulfilment of the plan for the year is a prerequisite for this, especially since it will be the basis from which the implementation of the new Five year Plan will be launche d. The proper elaboration of the new Five year Plan, its compilation in good time, is a decisive task.

I would like to mention something here which I have not mentioned in the report. that in the course of the Congress campaign the Central Committee's December resolution constituted a very important element. It dealt with the people's economic problems and declared its stand openly in a detailed communique. Comrades may remember that on that occasion the Central Committee, very frankly, concretely and very seriously turned to the Party membership and the country's public opinion with reference to economic problems arising out of new processes in the world economy which could definitely be felt here, since - as you could hear in the report - our total annual exports account for nearly 50 per cent of the national income. This is the consequence of the peculiarities of our economic life. One might say; perhaps, that the Central Committee's public statement was made at a proper and suitable time [few indistinct words], and that, in fact, it was helpful in our Congress campaign. Had it happened later, the workers would not have been able to treat the matter as seriously as it had to be treated.

This experience, I think, goes to show - this is a communist saying and a very important saying at that - that the best policy is always the principled policy. I think, we might add - and you will not take it as boasting if I put it this way - that the best policy is principled policy and open policy. All our experience shows that no problem exists, however grave, with which we could not turn in confidence to the Party members, to the working class, to the people, because they appreciate it if they are treated as adults. If that is not the case, they tell the leader to speak about the problem, about the issue at stake and what is to be done - and not to evade the issues. I think that our Party has introduced mnd follows a correct practice.

Everyone can testify that people have made their assessments; they have been thinking about these questions. There is no panic here whatever. People are realistic about the situation. They are optimistic. They do know that if they rely on the two sources of strength - our domestic potential which we are still far from having exploited fully, and the possibilities inherent in the fraternal co-operation of the socialist countries, all tasks will prove soluble to a satisfactory degree and at a satisfactory level. And it will be possible to assure the country's continued and unbroken economic development, including the further development of our means of production and productive equipment and the raising of the standard of living, as well as cultural progress.

Now I should like to say a few words about our historical course and the future. In the youth movement, in the Communist Youth League, 15th March, 21st March and 4th April are observed as Revolutionary Days, and they are completely right in this. So, if we are thinking of the great historical course of our people, we can take 1848-49, the freedom fight in those years, whose class aim was - do not forget that serfdom was still in force then - the attainment of bourgeois equality and the achievement of national independence. This revolution failed, but we must respect and preserve its spirit because, at that time, it expressed aspirations corresponding to the interests of the Hungarian people and nation. According to assessments, in the view of Marx and Engels this revolution also served the struggle of the peoples of Europe.

Another date which we have worthily commemorated this very day - since today is the anniversary of 21st March 1919 - is the proclamation of the Hungarian Republic of Councils, which surpassed 1848 in its class aims since it set as its target the liberation of the working class and the annihilation of capitalist exploitation, the destruction of the feudal system and, though this is seldom mentioned but as I began with 1848, I mention it also stood up for the national cause, and the Hungarian Red Army of the 1919 Republic of Councils fought for the independence and liberty of the Hungarian nation, thus for a national aim.

The third great day is 4th April, the 30th anniversary of our liberation, and, placing it in a wider international context - since the various countries of Eastern Europe were liberated at different times - the last Hitlerite-fascist soldier being driven out of Hungary on 4th April this is our Liberation Day, but under the collective name we may say it is the day of historic victory over Hitlerite fascism. This took place on 9th May and we remember the chief victor, the Soviet Union, and the sacrifices of the Soviet people.

The annihilation of Hitlerite fascism brought a new era, not only in the history of the Hungarian people, and not only in the history of the Eastern European peoples, but in the history of the whole of Europe, and we could even perhaps say in the history of mankind. The winner - not victor but winner - in the historic victory over Hitlerite fascism is the Hungarian people. For the honour of the Hungarian people, the Hungarian Communists, Hungarian patriots and partisans fought in many theatres of war in Europe, but the fate of the country had been so shaped by history that it was forced by the fascist ruling class into the war against the USSR.

However, our people gained their liberty and national independence, and the free road of social development opened up before the people, which is now being appropriately utilized by our people. Therefore, we shall also commemorate in a worthy manner 4th April 1975, the 30th anniversary of the complete liberation of the Hungarian People's Republic, as well as 9th May 1975, the anniversary of the historic victory over Hitlerite fascism. The more so because, if we think about it - let us reflect for a moment about it being first and foremost the glorious Soviet Army which crushed, annihilated and forced into capitulation the fascist beast in its own cave 30 years ago, and that we have been struggling for 30 years for peace and security in Europe - this is why we should appropriately commemorate 9th May, the 30th anniversary of the victory over fascism.

This is our historic road. Our future is expressed, indicated and outlined in the Programme Declaration of the Party. The substantive message of our Programme Declaration is the construction of a developed socialist society and progress towards communism. At this point, I should like to say a few words about what I have already mentioned in the Report that it is the duty of the vanguard to show the way.

The showing of the way is the task of the vanguard. However, in implementing this, we ought to recognise that the vanguard must not rush ahead, because if it does so and becomes separated from the main force then it is no longer leading anyone, and what sort of a vanguard is it then? There is an example for this, too, in the history of our Party. I would only like to stress that the Party shows the way with this Programme Declaration.

I should like to join Comrade Ovari in saying that this Programme Declaration must be propagated and explained, and that the support of the entire class and people must be won for this Programme Declaration, so that we may realize it. It is very important that people do not agree with the content of the Programme Declaration only because they must, or because it is proper to agree, but that they should agree as a result of their inner convictions. The Party proposes this road because it wants to serve the cause of the working people and of the Hungarian people, with honour, integrity and the purest intention.

The vanguard must not, of course, lag behind there is an example for this in history and not even very long ago The Party has experienced (?a time) when it had to re-emerge from the background and start leading again, and this must be continued in the future

I would also mention the fact, because it belongs here, that there are no hostile class differences in Hungary today. This is thanks to the liquidation of the capitalist class as such, and of the landowner class as such, by the people. There are only classes in alliance here, now. Our alliance functions both as a class alliance and as an alliance of Party members with those outside the Party it functions and develops in a sound way.

However, even at this time there is always a question between the allies. If all the allies are asked whether they want socialism they will say 'Yes' with conviction. However, it is not equally urgent for everyone! This is where the difference lies, and so it is always a subject - and should always be a subject - for discussion among allies to determine the rhythm of development of the socialist revolution. The Party can only carry forward the socialist revolution if it realistically appraises the situation, if it can create the objective and subjective pre-conditions for promoting the revolution and only in this event will it really carry this forward.

Thus, with regard to the Programme Declaration and future prospects, I should like to stress here among Communists - and we should also do so whenever necessary before non-Communists - that along the historic path of the Hungarian Socialist Party [as heard] - which is no everyday phenomenon, as this Communist, Marxist-Leninist vanguard has existed and been struggling since 1918 by uniting the political forces of the working class - it has always managed to progress when it has advanced together with the masses. This is our great historical experience.

And this has been very spectacularly so with regard to the past 18 years. For we have not spared effort, time or patience in contacts with our allies. And in a certain sense it is easier to argue with (?opponents). But we have convinced people, explained things to them, and convinced them before we have implemented things. And everybody knows that this is how every pillar of our socialist system has come to rest in solid ground.

And the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party will always move with the masses and we should proclaim this. And we should learn that we cannot make anyone happy against his will, try as we may, with the best of intentions. We must first convince people about the path we ask them to take, then we must get them to follow us.

It is the firm conviction of the Central Committee that the path which it has outlined in the Programme Declaration, and which points the future, is the Party's own historic path, along which it should progress armed with sound experiences of work, with good feelings, in good spirits, in cohesion with the working class and in cohesion with the people, by consolidating mutual confidence. Thus, the goal is attractive and the road is good, and we must do our utmost to realise the Programme Declaration.

Naturally, it will arise at this point that we shall have to work, once again! But somehow the fact is that I can no longer make so bold as to recommend that we work more, because I believe that the honest followers of socialism already work as much as they can, as much as their strength will allow. But I do think that, here and there, there are still those who do not work and we should convince them, too, that one must work. Also those who have worked so far, should try not to increase the quantity of work. The thing is we should work better, because this, too, is possible and this, too, speeds up the rate of development.

Dear comrades in conclusion I should like to thank the delegates once more for their support, in their contributions, for the two Reports and the documents submitted to Congress. I should personally also like to thank the members of the Programme Declaration Drafting Committee and the Draft Resolution Editorial Committee for their labours in basing our work.

In conclusion, I ask the esteemed Congress to adopt the Central Committee's Report, the Central Control Committee's Report, the amended Organizational Statutes, the Programme Declaration and the Draft Resolution.

Excerpt from report

The First Secretary of the Central Committee, speaking briefly on matters of foreign policy, pointed out that the international activity of our Party and Government invariably served socialism, national independence and peace. The most important element in our international contacts is the co-operation we carry on with the Soviet Union. On a common front with the Soviet Union, the socialist countries, the international working class and the forces of progress and peace, we remain active in the cause of progress, for the aim of maintaining and consolidating peace.

On the principle of peaceful coexistence, Kadar added, Hungary builds relations with all the developed capitalist countries that show a readiness to do so. This is an important and necessary element in our policy line. Again, by this, we are contributing to the service of peace.

Janos Kadar next set forth the view that conditions are ripening for the successful conclusion of the European security conference.
